Giving "believing in ..." its own place

Young people are looking for "the meaning of...". We give them certain stepping-stones, founded on Christian values and tradition. They decide for themselves whether or not to use them in order to shape their own life, and develop its meaning.

Discussion

1st possibility

Everyone gets a list of 20 values and puts together a personal top 5. When the top 5's are read, someone keeps track of the values. At the end of the presentation, the group can have a look at the values that have been named the most. This leads to a discussion.

List of values: honesty, openness, creativity, happiness, friendship, trust, love, fairness, egoism, solidarity, thankfulness, tolerance, humour, faith, commitment, choosing, individuality, being yourself, respect (or other values you choose).

2nd possibility

A discussion is started by posing the following questions:

- Who is your God?
- What is your God?
- How do you see "God"?
- What makes you see "God" the way you do?
- In what way are you inspired by this?
- In what way can you depend on "God"?

Handicraft

The participants present their image of God by using non-expensive material. This is then discussed.

Guiding questions

1. Did you experience this task as difficult?
2. What is important in your image of God?
3. What was striking about the images others did?

Material: all sorts of handicraft material like paper, glue, scissors, paint, pencils, useless material, ...
