Action Card

Seeing others as equal - with respect - is one of the most important values in intercultural dialogue. It's the corner stone without which you cannot start building new relationships - cannot move on. Lack of respect and misunderstanding led to many conflicts in history; by trying to understand the people around us, we can enrich ourselves.

Respect

Game

The participants are split into 2 groups. Each group gets half a deck of cards. Each group is given the following assignment separately: "Bring all the cards to one side of the room". The game can start there.

Extra information (not for the players) :

If the 2 groups interpret the assignment correctly, they will decide together where they will drop all the cards. "Bring ALL the cards to ONE side of the room." No battle has to be fought, they only have to communicate. On a lot of occasions, groups will not listen carefully enough to the assignment. They will want to defend "their" cards, steal cards from the others, ... This is not what has been asked for!!

Guiding questions

1. What was the exact assignment?
2. What did you think of when you first heard the assignment?
3. What was your strategy?
4. Was there a turning point? When was it? What made it happen?
5. What did you learn?

Material: a deck of cards.

Discussion

Questionnaire

Provide two places in the room: one for 'yes' and one for 'no'. Read out the following statements and let the participants choose between yes and no:

- On the bus I give my seat away to an elderly person
- At night I feel safe in my city when I meet a group of North-African boys
- When I see someone in a wheelchair, I cross the street
- I want to be served in shops, and in pubs in my own language when I'm in my Country
- It is important to learn at least one foreign language

After every statement, you can lead a short discussion.
